The Porsche 911 Junior was designed by Porsche in the 1980s and sold by dealers with a total of about 200 children's cars. As a result, these "children's Porsche" can only rarely be found today and are a must for every Porsche collector. Collections are thus not only expanded by tractors, but also adorned by such small scale 911 Junior models. In addition, children and grandchildren are introduced at an early age to the joy of driving their own Porsche and usually learn to handle steering, brake and gas.
