The 991-generation Porsche 911 Speedster was first seen as a concept in 2018, intended to mark the company's 70th anniversary. By 2019 it had become a highly desirable production reality, with 1,948 examples created to mark the year that Ferry Porsche oversaw creation of the first 356.

Pairing a GT3-sourced 4.0-litre flat-six engine with a six-speed manual transaxle in a Cabriolet body, the 911 Speedster delivered exceptional performance, selling out immediately and winning instant acclaim as the ultimate type-991 model.

Essentially a 911 GT3 with its roof cut off, the 991-generation 911 Speedster features extensive use of carbon fiber for the front trunk lid, front fenders, doors, engine cover, and interior trim. It also retains the iconic raked-and-shortened windshield which is the true calling card of the Speedster.

Power is derived from a 4.0-liter flat six-cylinder engine rated at 502 horsepower and 346 pound-feet of torque. A six-speed manual transmission with rev-matching capability is standard, as are the formidable carbon-ceramic disc brakes with their enormous yellow calipers.

This well-presented example is finished in classic GT Silver with a black top, complemented by 20-inch silver wheels and a black leather interior with contrasting stitching. Many desirable factory upgrades enhance its appeal, including the front-axle lift system, Chrono package, an extended-range fuel tank, cruise control, and LED headlights in black with the Porsche Dynamic Light System. Interior additions include a Bose surround-sound system, rear camera, and aluminium detailing, in addition to door panels, and dashboard trimmed in leather.

The car has been protected with a Full XPEL PPF from new, ensuring a perfect quality paint for years and years to come.

First registered in Belgium in November 2019, this 911 Speedster boasts one owner from new and had covered just under 3.000 kilometers. This represents a tremendous opportunity to acquire one of the most coveted and rarest Porsches of modern times.

The car currently has Belgian registration.
